

No Fate

Written By
James Chan

If you see the Devil
Tell 'em I'm coming
If you see the Angel
Tell her not to wait up for me
If you see the prophet
Tell 'em not to hold his breath
Waiting in vain for better days

When you hear the bombs
You better start running
When you see the dam burst
You better brace for the worst
When we finally see the light
It'll be far to late
To pack up and make the great escape

And there's nowhere left to run
The guns won't win the battle
We're fighting shadows of our selves
What's here today is gone tomorrow
They say there is no fate but what we make
This is our fate make no mistake

If you take the train
Will you take me with you?
If you make a break
Do you mind if I tag along?
If the sky begins to cry
Can I build a wall?
Will lady grace embrace the damage done?

If I died tonight
Would it even matter?
If I left tomorrow
Would you even care if I've gone?
If I lived a lonely life could I rest a spell and maybe later hang my hat in Hell?