

When We Have Time

Written By
James Chan

Time is the vicious thief Constantly robbing us of something we never had enough of to begin with

Each rotation spins us out across the mantle in different directions Crossing paths as we go Stopping every so often to take it all in when we have time...

We think deeply
We listen intently
We love patiently
And take the time to show it

When we have time....

We waste it with reckless abandon in hopes that there'll be more of it

We examine it to measure how far we've come
We share it with all those who don't have enough time

Because there never seems to be enough